While walking through this park, there is really only one direction. Keep an eye on your right, give it all your attention. This tree grows large and sheds its bark; the contrast between the white bark and the green leaves is stark.

Keep walking a while and cross the bridge, then take the gravel path that looks up on a wooded ridge. Once on this path, it won’t take long to find the sign for a trail where you can find peace of mind. This trail gets its name for its big, old trees, so finding this clue should be a total breeze.
